Office Hours and Class Meetings

This is a Web-based class.

What does that mean? We will NOT meet in a classroom. There will be no F2F (face to face) lectures, no DE-TV lectures. Instruction will be conducted via these pages and through e-mail.

There are those of us who believe that the Web-based class is here to stay. There are both positive and negative elements to this mode of instruction. On the plus side, students need not come to campus for class meetings and, for the most part, they can choose their learning time.

This class follows the university calendar. Assignments are due when they are due. The course is quasi self paced. By that I mean, there are weekly assignments. You are expected to complete those assignments during the scheduled week, when during the week you choose to do them is up to you.

It is my opinion that process and informational instruction can be conducted effectively using Web-based instruction. Skills based instruction is more problematic. For that reason, when we turn to the use of various electronic search and retrieval tools like GILS, LEXIS, and Dialog, we will use streaming video for demo purposes. I have set aside a three week block of time for familiarization with these services.

Policy

The following are official statements of University policy taken from a memorandum dated August 2000. Please feel free to discuss these with me at any time. If any of these policies apply to you, please do not hesitate to bring your concerns or requirements to my attention. We will adhere to both the spirit and the letter of these policies.

Sexual Harassment Policy/Sexual Assault Policy
Racial and Ethnic Harassment Policy
Discrimination Policy - Other than Racial/Ethnic or Sexual Religious Holidays
Reasonable Accommodation
Academic Misconduct

Text Books

Two texts are assigned for this course

Peter Hernon, Harold Relyea, Robert Dugan, and Joan Cheverie, United States Government Information Sources: Policies and Sources Libraries Unlimited, 2002 and its Supplement CD-ROM (included with test).

and

Peter Hernon, , Robert Dugan, and John Shuler US Government on the Web, Libraries Unlimited, 3 ed 2003.

These books are available at online booksellers like Amazon, Barnes and Noble, and Borders.

You will note that these books address United States government information sources. They do a fine job of what they do. What they don't do is address state and local government or non-US governments.

You may find the course lectures a little light in the last three weeks of the course. It is, in fact, not light. We will lean heavily on the texts. For me to in effect copy what the texts do so well is at best redundant and most likely represents a waste of time for us all.

One final note on these books. As with all things, these books out date rapidly. These books may out date more rapidly than some. Web links to change, although government links are stable as links go. New resources are created. Old ones are modified or disappear. The model persists however. Governments are moving more and more to electronic media, our courses and texts need necessarily to keep pace.

Class Meetings

The VSU Academic Calendar can be found at: <http://www.valdosta.edu/cgi-bin/webevent/webevent.cgi?cmd=open&cal=cal3>

Classes begin January 10, 2005 and end May 2, 2005. The week beginning Monday March 28 through Friday April 1, 2005 is Spring Break. Mark your calendars accordingly.

Week 8 Week 8 Week 8 Week 8		The United States federal government The US federal government is a very complex series of institutions. Simply put, it consists of the executive (President, Cabinet, Departments, etc.), the legislative branch (Congress: House of Representatives and the Senate), and the Judiciary (Supreme Court, Courts of Appeals, District Courts, etc.). Each of these has a multitude of document sources, document purposes, document nomenclature, etc. Readings Hernon, Relyea, Dugan, and Cheverie, Ch 11
Week 9 Week 9 Week 9 Week 9 Week 9 Week 9		National Governments (other than the United States), including Tribal and Indigenous Peoples Governments Just when you thought it was getting easy -- there are some 200 plus countries -- sovereign nations-- each with its own system, document stream, structures, printing, publishing, and cataloging schemes. If it were ever true that government documents librarians were not required to be aware of and pay attention to these documents, those days are over. Note for example that many US federal depository libraries are also depository libraries for the UN, the EC, state governments, and other entities. National government -Link NativeAmerican-Link
